THE FIGHT IS FIERCE. Struggle to Obtain Control of Oregon Navigation.

New York, May 16.-The fight between the Dillon-Smith and Villard parties for the control of Oregon Navigation continues very fierce. The transfer books of the company close to-morrow, and both parties were actively engaged in borrowing and buying it. TWO NEW COMMISSIONERS.

John W. Douglass and L. G. Hine. APPOINTMENTS MADE TO-DAY. The Men who Will Succeed Messrs. Webb and Wheatley.

THEIR NAMES ANNOUNCED LATE THIS AFTER-NOON-SKETCHES OF THE CAREERS OF THE TWO APPOINTEES-THEIR RESIDENCE IN WASHINGTON This afternoon, just before 3 o'clock, the President announced the appointment of John

W. Douglass and Lemon G. Hine to be Commissioners of the District of Columbia to succeed Messrs. Webb and Wheatley. SKETCH OF MR. J. W. DOUGLASS. In the person of Mr. J. W. Douglass the District secures for one of its governors a man of strong character, acknowledged executive unassuming personal manners, thorough acquaintance with District matters and the needs of the people. He is a little more elderly in appearance than he is represented to be by the accompanying cut, which was made from a photograph taken sev eral years ago. He was born in Philadelphia, but when he was ten years old his parents moved to Erie. where he received his education, graduating rom the Erie Academy. He then entered the lav office of the Hon. Jas Thompson, late chief

J. W. DOUGLASS. justice of Pennsylvania and was admitted to the bar of Erie in 1851. The young man took a great interest in the political questions that were then beginning to make the air quiver with possibilities, espousing the republican cause, to which he has clung ever since. When the great campaign of 1860 was begun Mr. Douglass was in the front rank of the Eric republicans, and did yeoman service in aid of the election of President incoln. He was rewarded for this good work by an appointment as collector of internal revenue for the nineteenth district of Pennsylvania, with headquarters at Erie, in 1861, when the internal revenue system was adopted He held that position until 1869, when his zeal and energy were recognized and he was made first deputy commissioner of internal revenue. In 1871 he was appointed commis sioner of the bureau, and served four years, retiring in May, 1875, to be-gin the practice of law in this city with Judge Williams, who was Attorney-General under President Grant. During his term at the head of the bureau Mr. Douglass instituted an important reform, abolishing the of assessor and assistant throughout the country and their duties between the assessor various deputy collectors and an assessment division which he established in the office here and which is still in operation. This change made a reduction in the annual expenses of co lecting the revenue of about $1,500,000, and in the actual force employed of about 1,500 Since May, 1875, he has resided in this city.

engaged in the practice of law before the different courts of the District, the executive de partments, the Court of Claims, and the United States Supreme Court. He regards himself as citizen of Washington exclusively, and is is deeply interested in every question affecting the welfare of the people of the District. Mr. Douglass is a near neighbor of Mr. Webb, his predecessor, whom he knows intimately. A SKETCH OF MR. HINE. Mr. Lemon G. Hine, who will succeed Mr.

Wheatley as the democratic member of the board lege, and studied lawat Ann Arbor, Mich., where he commenced the practice of his profession. When the war broke out he left his practice, as also his young wife and child, and, enlisting in an Ohio regiment, served in the west until the close of hostilities. A few months after (in 1865) he came to this city and took up his residence in South Washington. He formed a legal partnership with ex-Gov. Ford, of Ohio, and for a numper of years was the iunior member of the firm of Ford & Hine. During this time he bebecame quite popular in his section and was elected to the councils L. G. HINE. several terms. He was an independent candi date for delegate to Congress from the District during the days of the District territorial government against Gen. Norton P. Chipman, republican, by whom he was defeated. His legal practice became very large, and in 1875 and 1876 he led the entire bar in the number of cases on the docket. He about that time took Mr. Sidney T. Thomas into partnership, and the firm of Hine & Thomas was for many years one of the most successful in the legal profession here. Some four or five years ago he became interested in patents applicable to typesetting by machinery, and in 1887 he retired from active practice to take the position of president of the National Typographic association. Mr. Hine resides with his family, a wife and six children, on Lincoln avenue on the Glenwood road, just north of the city limits, and his affable manners and genial disposition have won for him the friendship of his neighbors generally as well as that of the residents of other localities. Mr. Hine, who is in New York, is expected here to-morrow.

cently in a series of articles given an interesting account of the interior of the German parliament. Speaking of its general appearance, he says, in a moderately sized room are gathered specimens of all the various races of Great Germany; the Bavarians and the monumental Rhinelanders with beards a la Lohengrin; the pure-bred Prussians, squat and smug like Richter, who keep by themselves, and pass without looking either to right or to left; the gentlemen from Silesia, big and bony, with blazing-red beard and the air of an aldermanic captain of militia, or of an English yeoman, foe of foxes, and officer of volunteers. There is no lack of uniforms in the group, and no lack of overcoats folded and held on the arm-overcoats bourgeois, bureaucratic and professorial. Still more numerous are the collarless ecclesi-astical coats, worn alike by Protestant pastors and members of the Catholic center. The members for the conquered provinces are con-spicuous spots in this crowd. Antoine, despite his great military mustachios, would not be taken by the greenest or most short-sighted re-porter for a captain of the landwehr, and the Parisian vest of young Baron Zorn, of Bulach, is in sharp contrast with that of his brother sportsmen of Brandenburg or the Vieille-Marche.

The personal portraits are all exceedingly good, though there is nothing new said about Prince Bismarck and others, who have been described ad nauseam; but the following description of Herr Windthorst is clever and lifelike: The figure of a gnome, the long neck of a child, great blue spectacles which shelter the child, great blue spectacles which shelter the remains of used-up eyes, a large mouth with a satiricle twist. Such is Herr Windthorst, the pearl of his party, the most redoubtable parliamentary tactician, the only adversary Prince Bismarck has been unable to overcome, and with whom he has often had to treat on equal terms. He is not a thunderbolt of eloquence. From his toothless gums comes a feeble voice, which would not be able to travel past the tribune or the bench from which he speaks tribune or the bench from which he speaks were it not that the insatiable curiosity which this resourceful spirit provokes establishes in the assembly a perfect silence as soon as he arises. The skill and irony which at each step shine in his oratory make every one forget that this thickset little man, with his wooden voice and monotonous gesture, is the very opposite of an orator. It is his mind which has held together for eighteen years without visible change, and even after the religious peace, that paradoxical Catholic party built of elements so neterogeneous—great conservative and feudal lords, little clergy with democratic tendencies, and socialists.

Gen. Jas. A. Ekin (retired), U. S. A., brought with him another Kentuckian, John L. Wheat, of Louisville. They apologized for calling, but gave as the cause a rumor which stated that the collectorship of the fifth Kentucky district had been given away to some man whom they did not want to get it. While they were in, however, they said a few words in behalf of John L. Wheat, who is a candidate for the surveyorship of customs at Louisville.
Samuel C. Elliott was the only other Kentuckian who called. F. D. Lee, a colored Virginia lawyer and one of the delegates to the last Chicago convention, is interested in the distribution of patronage in his state, and he talked to the President about it; he was pleased with his reception.

THE SECOND CONTROLLERSHIP OF THE TREASURY. Rumor has it now that B. F. Gilkeson will be appointed second controller to-day or to-morrow. Mr. Gilkeson was the Pennsylvanian who was displaced as solicitor of internal revenue by Mr. Alphonso Hart, of Ohio. He was talked of for a Florida jugdeship, but it is said that the Floridians have agreed to abstain from disagreeing, and the probabilities point to the elevation of Mr. Swayne, of Kissimee, to the bench in the United States court.

Rear-Admiral Stewart used to relate the following anecdote—the incident occurred during the examination of Capt. Tatnall: Tatnallthen Midshipman Tatnall, and a very modest, retiring young gentleman-was ordered up to be overhauled, when the following dialogue between a rough, jolly old commodore, the senior officer present, and himself occurred,

Here the young officer drooped his head despondingly upon his breast, and the "old salt" continued sharply: "Come, sir, what would you do with your ship?"

CIVIL RIGHTS IN THEATERS. The Case of Wm. Easton, Doorkeeper at

Harris' Bijou Theater, on Trial. The civil-rights case of William Easton, doorkeeper at Harris' Bijou Theater, as heretofore mentioned in THE STAR, was called for trial in the Police Court this afternoon. Campbell Carrington appeared for defendant. In calling the court's attention to the case Mr. Carrington said he agreed with counsel that colored people were entitled to the same rights as white people, but he certainly did not think they were entitled to any more privileges than white people. In this case he said he expected to prove that the prosecuting witness wanted to be treated bet-ter than whites are treated. A plea of not guilty was entered

Mr. Carrington asked that the ladies who were witnesses be separated, as ladies' imaginations were usually stronger than men. TESTIMONY OF LAWYER PRYOR.

The doorkeeper did not give the him seats. The doorkeeper did not give usher the checks. Witness started toward the front seats, but the usher called him back and

"These are the seats for you." Witness re-turned to the doorkeeper and asked for the return of his checks or money, but was refused and was told that he could have the seats shown him or nothing. His wife re-mained at the door and retained her ticket. She did so because witness suspected something
